Tracing the Mirror Maze

Four masters, one for each house. Print them at 100% (actual size) on plain paper. They are the same size and in the same place on the page as the printed maps, so a traced map and a printed one stack together.

1. Age the paper first. A light, even wash of cold tea or coffee, darker at the edges than the middle. Dry it flat under heavy books. Keep the middle pale: four stained sheets stack up.

2. Line it up. Tape a master to a bright window (or the TV showing a white screen), lay the aged sheet on top and tape it down. Trace the four crosshairs first, so every map has the same frame.

3. Black pen for everything solid: the walls, the star, the EXIT, the title, the signature, the notes and the doodle. Use the same pen for all four maps. The lines on the master wobble a little on purpose: a hurried student drew them in the dark.

4. The quarter circles: fill each one in solid. The white dot shows where its point must sit, right in the middle of the square. These are what make the way out appear, so take care here.

5. The dashed grey lines are the secret picture (the eye, and the hollow letters under the maze). Trace them lightly in pencil or a grey pen, and fill the letters in faintly. They should be easy to miss on one map, and obvious when all four are stacked.

6. Write the notes in your own version of their hand. Each mapmaker writes differently: Aldous scrawls (Gryffindor), Merryn prints neatly (Hufflepuff), Isolde writes in a quick, joined-up hand and measures everything (Ravenclaw), Silas writes in a narrow, careful script and says as little as possible (Slytherin). The notes sit in different corners, so they don't pile up when stacked.

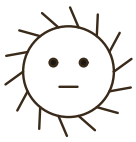

7. Check the stack. All four together, crosshairs lined up, against a white screen: the whole circles should make a clear path from the centre to the edge, the eye should look back at you, and the words should read HE SEES YOU.

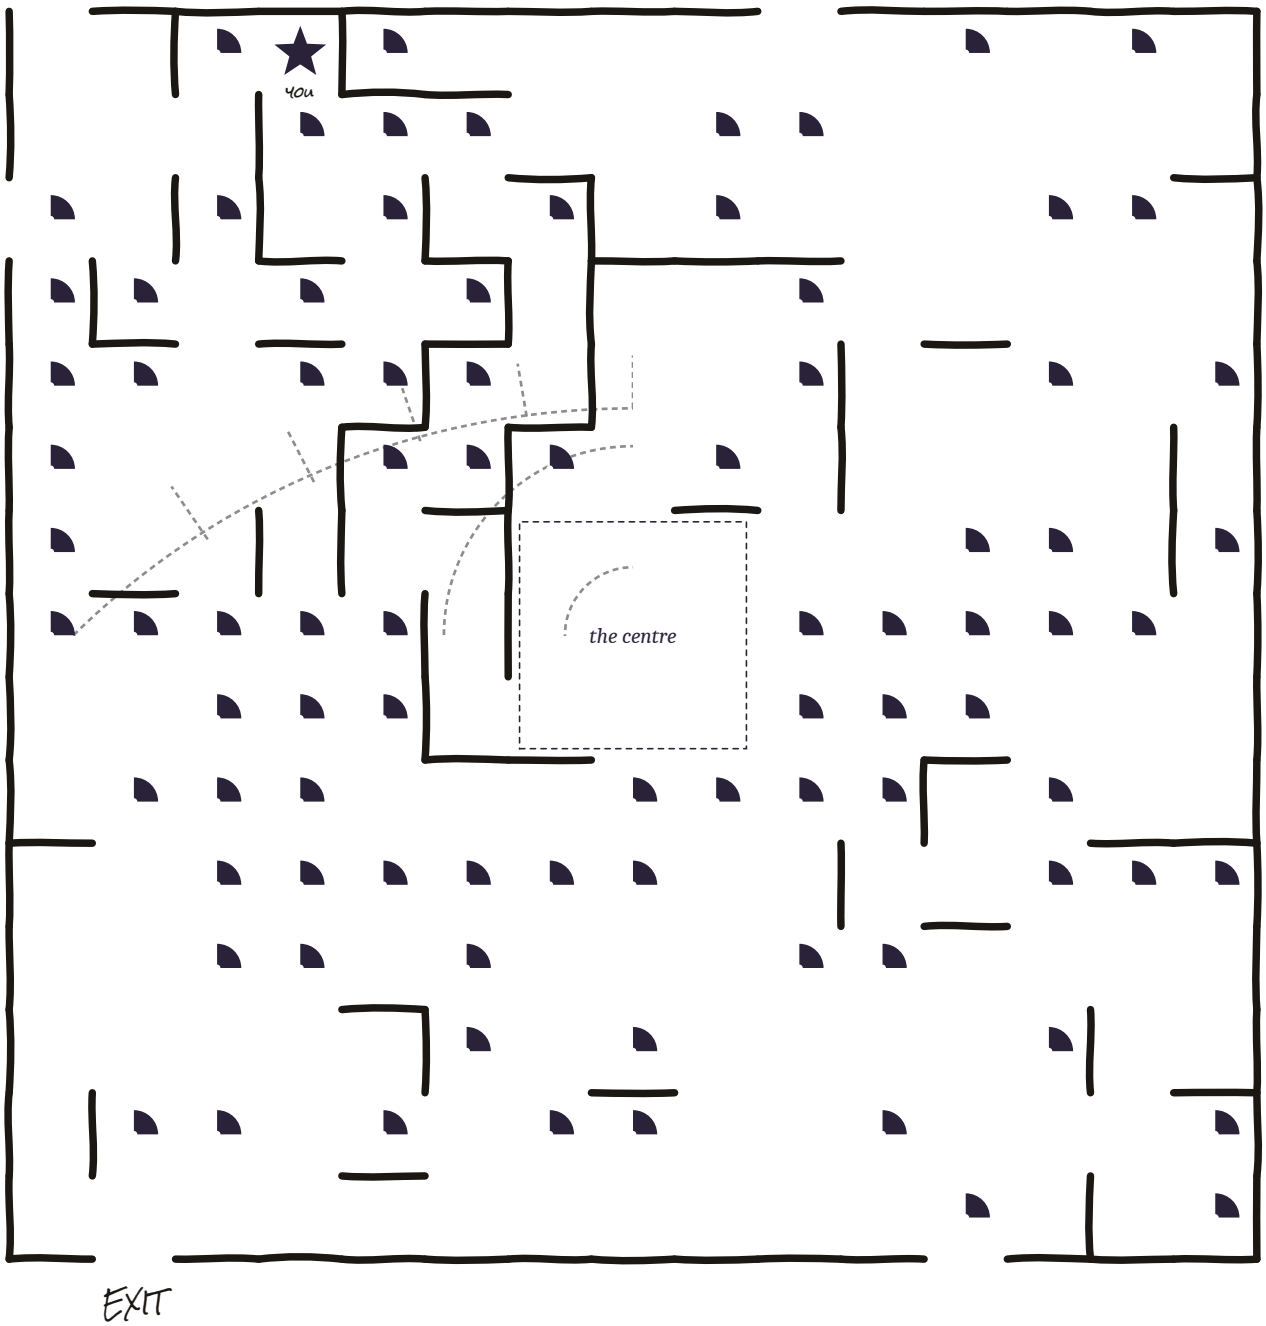

About 30 to 45 minutes a map. Put the masters away afterwards: the players must never see them.

The Way Through the Dark

"I came through the glass and ran. This is all I remember. The others drew the rest." Aldous Penhallow, Gryffindor, 1726

CAME IN HERE AND RAN!!
DO NOT STOP MOVING. IT FOLLOWS THE SOUND OF YOU.

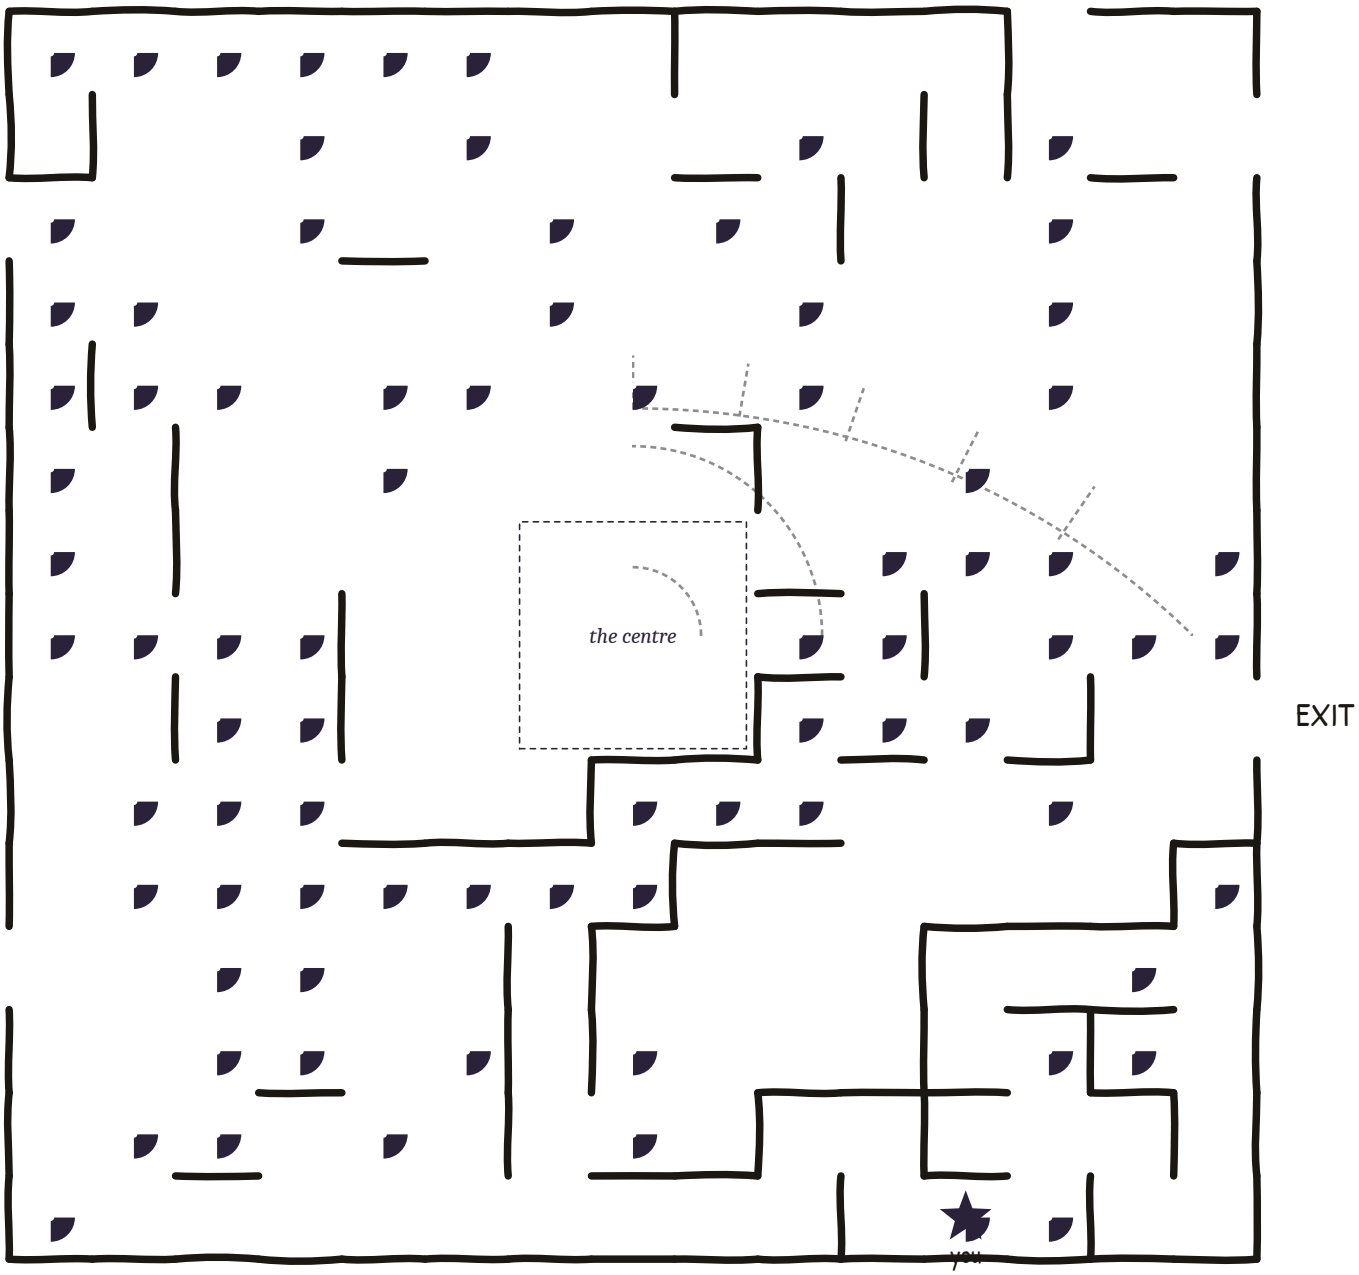

Mirror Maze tracing master: the Gryffindor map · print at 100% · trace in black pen; dashed grey lines lightly in pencil

The way through the dark

"I walked it twice, slowly. My part is right. Trust the others for theirs." Merryn Holt, Hufflepuff, 1726 walked it twice. counted every step.

the round room in the middle is safe. it will not come in.

Mirror Maze tracing master: the Hufflepuff map · print at 100% · trace in black pen; dashed grey lines lightly in pencil

The way through the dark

"I measured what I could in the dark. Where my lines stop, I could not see." — Isolde Varga, Ravenclaw, 1726 where my lines stop, I could not see.

four of us, four different sets of walls. why?

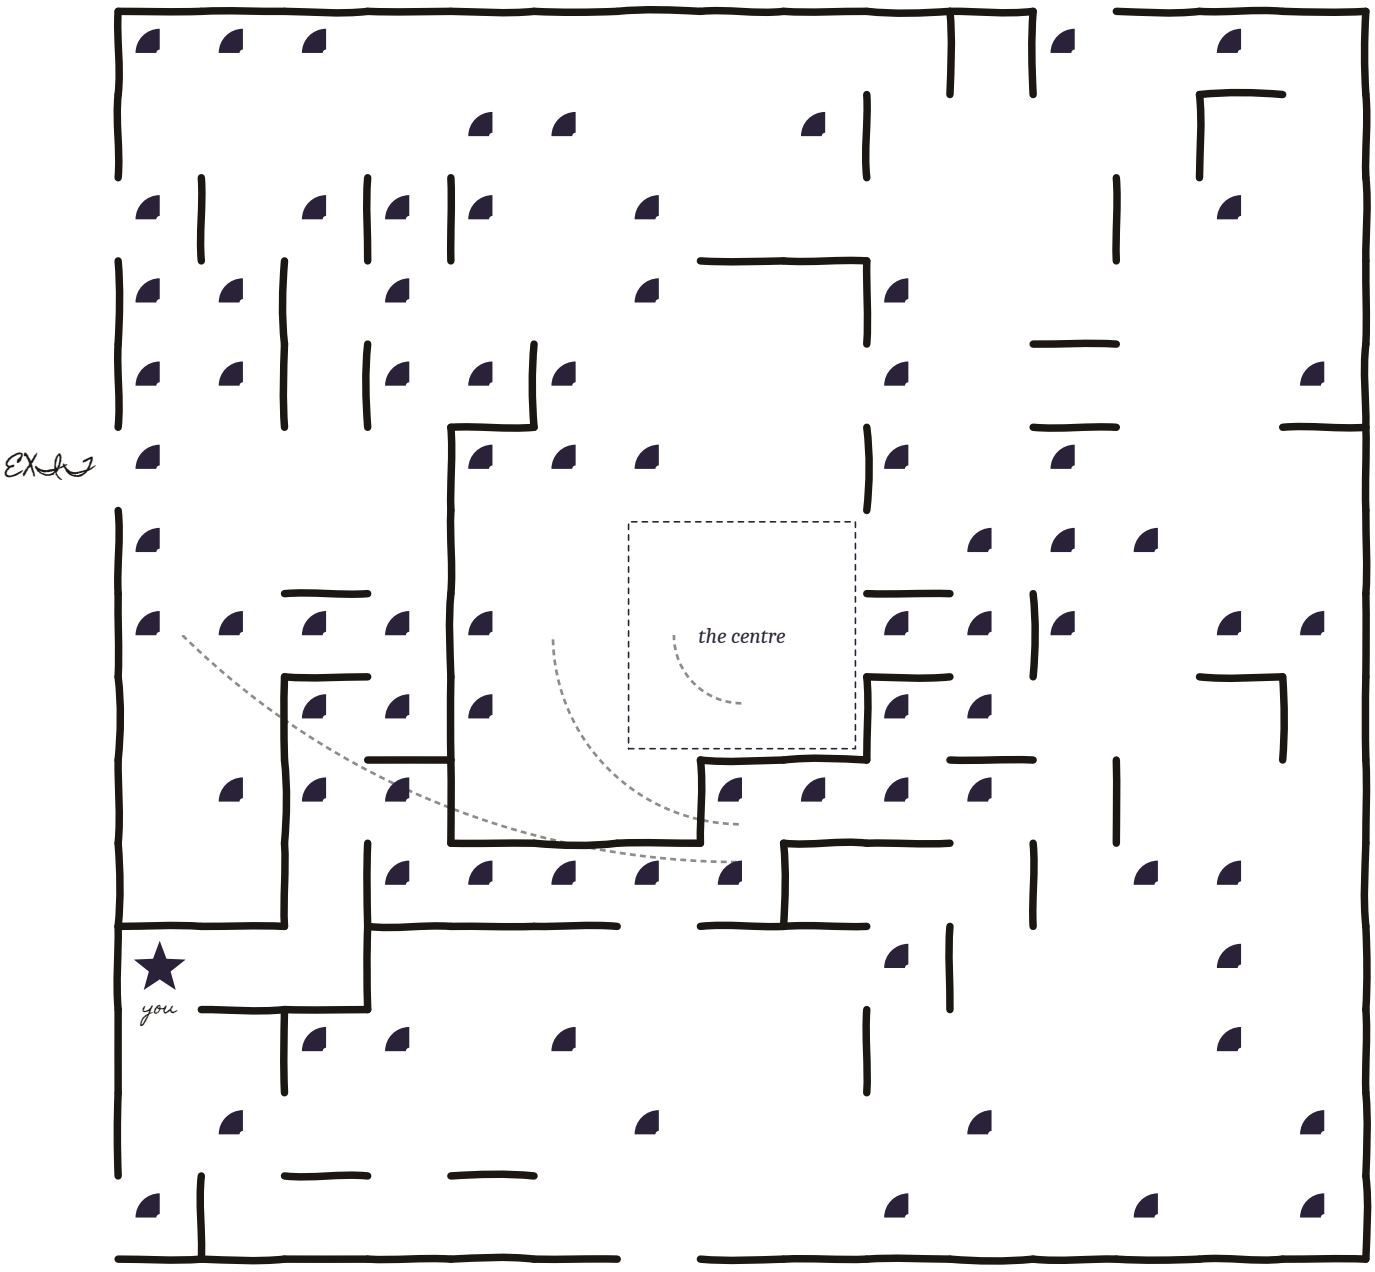

Mirror Maze tracing master: the Ravenclaw map · print at 100% · trace in black pen; dashed grey lines lightly in pencil

The way through the dark

"I marked only what was useful to me. Find the others where the four roads meet. We did." Silas Crane, Slytherin, 1726 only what was useful.

the stone in the middle listens.

Mirror Maze tracing master: the Slytherin map · print at 100% · trace in black pen; dashed grey lines lightly in pencil