PROPS

Things to hold in your hands

Paper, glue, air-dry clay and black yarn. Every prop here matches something that already happens in the game, so the phone and the prop always agree.

Your players loved the props on the first night, so this book gives you more of them. Each one turns up at a moment the game already has: a clue they pick up, a quest reward, a trial on Day 7. When the app gives them the item, you hand them the real thing. The templates at the back are printed at the right size: print them at 100% (not "fit to page"), cut inside the lines, and glue.

Before you start

- Air-dry clay needs time. Small pieces dry in a day, thick ones take two or three. Make everything a few days before the session, and turn pieces over halfway so the bottom dries too.
- Keep clay at least as thick as a pencil. Thin edges crack and snap when they dry. If a crack appears, smooth in a little wet clay.
- Press, don't carve. Runes and pictures look best pressed into soft clay with a toothpick, the tip of a pencil, a fork or a paper clip.
- Make paper look old. Brush on strong cold tea or coffee, let it dry, then crumple it and flatten it again. Tear the edges instead of cutting them. Never burn them.
- Colour without paint. Rub pencil graphite or a black marker into pressed lines and wipe the top clean, so the lines stay dark. Yellow or orange marker makes clay look gold.
- Black yarn ties everything. Roll scrolls and tie them, hang tags from it, and keep a long tangle for the Devil's Snare.

What to make, and when it comes out

Prop	Made from	Comes out when	Template

Is there Quidditch?

Not a match, no. But Quidditch is in the castle: Madam Hooch teaches Flying Lessons on the Quidditch Pitch, the Trophy Room is full of old cups, and one hidden quest, The Old Cup, starts with a Quidditch trophy. That is where your Golden Snitch goes.

The Golden Snitch

The story. Long ago, a forgotten house team won the cup in the Trophy Room. Their Seeker kept the winning Snitch and hid something inside it at the top of the Astronomy Tower. When a student polishes that cup in detention, they read the engraving: “Where the stars are closest, the second ring waits.” At the Astronomy Tower they find the Snitch, and inside it, the star chart for the Turning Lock.

How to make it

- Roll a ball of clay the size of a walnut. Push a pencil about two thirds of the way in, wiggle it to make a hole, and pull it out.
- Press two curved lines around the middle with a toothpick, like seams. With a knife, cut a thin slit on each side for the wings.
- Let it dry for two days. Colour it gold with a yellow or orange marker (or wrap it in yellow paper and glue it down).
- Cut the two wings from template T3, fold each along its spine for strength, and glue them into the slits.
- Roll the star chart (T5) tightly, tie it with a short piece of black yarn, and slide it into the hole.

At the table

The moment they reach the Astronomy Tower on The Old Cup, put the Snitch on the table in front of them, before the app says anything. Let them work out that something is inside. Then complete the objective on the GM screen, and the star chart appears in their Bag.

> TIP
>
> Make a second, smaller Snitch with no scroll. On the day of Flying Lessons, hide it somewhere in the real room before the session. The first student who spots it and catches it earns +5 house points. Madam Hooch is impressed.

The rune tablets

Three slates, each with three pictures and the word for each picture carved underneath in runes. They are how the players learn the rune alphabet. The app already shows them on the phone; the clay version is what they pass around the table.

How to make them

- Roll clay flat, about as thick as your little finger, and cut a slab the size of a phone (or a little smaller). Break a corner off and stick it back on with a smear of wet clay, so it looks cracked and mended.
- Lay template T4 on top and press through the paper along each rune with a toothpick, then lift the paper and deepen the lines. Draw each little picture the same way.
- Let them dry, then rub graphite or black marker into the lines and wipe the surface. The hearth slate is soot-black: rub graphite over the whole thing. The garden slate is mossy: a little green marker in the cracks.

> TIP
>
> Hand over the slate when they pick the tablet up in the app. They keep it until the end of the campaign, next to their rune notebook. Watching them hold two slates side by side to compare runes is the best part.

The ring clues and the Turning Lock

Three clues, each naming one symbol: a scratched note (Trophy Room), a star chart (Astronomy Tower, inside the Snitch) and a feathered card (Owlery). Together they open the Turning Lock in the Room of Requirement.

- Clues (T5): print, tea-stain and cut out. Scratch over the note with a pin so it looks clawed. Fold the feathered card in half and glue a paper feather to the front.
- The lock (T6): glue the base and the three rings onto cereal-box card before cutting them out. Stack them, biggest at the bottom, and push a pencil through all four centres. The arrow on the base stays still; the rings turn. (The base is only a little bigger than ring 1, so the arrow peeks out above it.)
- Clay version: make three thick clay rings that slide onto the pencil, and press the six symbols into the edge of each, in the order printed on T6.

> TIP
>
> Put the paper lock in front of them the moment they find the chest. Let them turn it with their hands while the puzzle is up on the TV. When they think they have it, they say it out loud and you solve it on the GM screen.

Vale's diary and the torn map

The diary (T7) is three pages in Vale's runes. Tea-stain them dark, tear the edges, and give each page as it is found. Once they have all three, they lay them side by side and decode the whole thing.

The map is one sheet torn in two. Draw a rough castle on an old-looking sheet of paper (copy the TV map if you like), then tear it down the middle with a zig-zag tear. Glue the rune strip from T7 along the torn edge of the left half. That half belongs to the Fenwick from the start: give it to them at the next session. Keep the right half yourself. On Day 4, when they win it from Cassius Thorne, hand it over and let them fit the torn edges together.

Owl letter seals

When you send someone a parcel by owl, give them a real folded letter as well. Press a ball of clay flat onto a circle of paper, and stamp it with the end of a pen, a button, a coin edge or a fork before it dries. Make a handful at once and keep them in a box. Fold the letter, tie it with black yarn, and push a dry seal under the knot with a dot of glue.

> TIP
>
> A sleeping draught for the student with the snoring dorm-mate: a tiny clay bottle on a piece of yarn, tied to the letter.

The Devil's Snare

Before Day 7, cut five or six long pieces of black yarn and tangle them loosely together. When the party falls into the Devil's Snare, drop the tangle over their hands on the table.

> READ ALOUD
> The vines curl around your wrists. The more you struggle, the tighter they hold.

Each time a player says they struggle, pull the yarn a little tighter. It lets go when someone casts light or fire at it (Lumos Solem or Incendio), or when they all go still and calm. Then the fight on the GM screen begins (or ends).

The Seven Bottles

Seven little clay bottles: two tall, two small, two round and one tiny. Let them dry, then wrap each in its paper label from T8 (number and colour). Line them up in order, and put the riddle card in front of them.

> TIP
>
> Let them pick up the bottles and move them around while they argue. When they agree, the one who drinks lifts the bottle and says its number, and you solve the puzzle on the GM screen.

Secret gifts and family keepsakes

At the start of session 2, when you hand back the student books, slip each player a sealed card (T1). Inside is the secret they told you about, written as a gift: what it does every day, what it does once a day, and its drawback. Give the same gift on the GM screen too (Players tab, Give a secret gift), so it is on their phone.

Keepsakes (T2) are one small paper object for each family's secret. Each is a reminder of the mystery they arrived with. Give them out with the gift cards, or the first time that secret matters.

Family	Gift	A clay token to go with it (optional)
Blackwood	Spider-Speech	Spiders were left out of the game on purpose before, so keep them to words: no clay spiders and no spider pictures, unless you have checked with your table first.
Sinclair	Fashionably Late	A clay pocket watch: a flat disc with a loop of yarn, its hands pressed in at a quarter past.
Fenwick	Green Thumb	A little clay seed pod, or a Mandrake root with a tiny angry face.

Family	Gift	A clay token to go with it (optional)
Thornbury	Rat-Speech	A tiny clay rat with a black yarn tail.
Quill	Mirror Self	A small round clay hand-mirror, with a circle of foil or shiny paper glued in.
Penrose	The Battered Suitcase	A matchbox-sized paper suitcase with the letters N.S. on the handle, and the three creature cards from T1 inside.
Okafor	The Invisibility Cloak	A small square of grey paper folded like a cloak, with “Do not lose” written inside.

THE MIRROR IN THE DARK

Four maps, one way out

On Day 1, a tall mirror in the Library drops the whole party into a pitch-black maze. Each house holds one old map. Alone, every map leads to a dead end. Together, held up to the light, they show the only way out, and something watching.

How it works

- Four maps (T9), one per house. Long ago, four students escaped this mirror: one from each house. Each drew the part of the maze they remembered, and signed it. Give each house its own map. Nobody is told they are the same maze.
- Each map is right from its YOU star to the centre, so every house can find the middle.
- Beyond the centre, every map lies a little. It shows only some of the walls, and its own EXIT, which is really bricked up by walls drawn on the other three maps.
- Stacked and held against the lit TV, the walls add up to the real maze and every EXIT closes. Each map also carries one quarter of some little circles: only where all four agree does a circle come out whole, and the whole circles mark the way out.
- The secret in the stack: each map also hides one quarter of a picture. Alone it is a few odd curves. Stacked, a great painted eye appears round the centre of the maze, with the words HE SEES YOU beneath it. The four signatures line up neatly at the top, one under another.
- T10 is your key. The GM screen shows the same maze while the puzzle is up, with everyone moving on it, and the watcher.

Making the maps

- Print T9 at 100% (actual size). Ordinary printer paper is fine: four sheets held flat against a bright TV show through clearly.
- Or draw them by hand: Mirror-Maze-Tracing.pdf has a tracing master for each house, in its mapmaker's own handwriting, with their notes and a doodle in the margins. Print the masters, tape one to a bright window under aged paper, and trace in pen. Its first page explains how.
- Test it before the night: stack all four, line up the four crosshairs in the corners, and hold them against a white screen (or a window). You should see the whole circles, the eye and the words.
- Age them a little if you like (a light wash of cold tea, dried flat), but keep it light so the stack still shines through. Fold each map in four.

Running it (Day 1, Free time)

READ ALOUD

At the far end of the Library, past the last shelf, stands a mirror taller than a door. As you pass, its glass ripples like water. Before anyone can step back, it swallows you whole. Then: nothing. Pitch black, and cold stone underfoot. There is a folded piece of parchment in your hand. And somewhere in the dark, something is breathing.

ON THE GM SCREEN

Puzzles tab, The Mirror in the Dark, Put it on the TV. The TV and every phone go black, and the dark hums and drips. Hand each house its map. Everyone taps Open your eyes.

- Walking: each phone starts on its house's YOU, with four arrows. It knows the walls: walking into one says Thud. The phone never shows the maze, so they follow the paper with a finger. Housemates share one map and have to talk.
- The watcher: a cold presence drifts through the dark, and hunts anyone it gets near. When it is close their phone thumps like a heartbeat and they feel breath on their neck. If it reaches them, they are thrown back to their start (1d4). It can't enter the centre: that is the safe room.
- Past the centre, one bump throws them back to their start (1d4). A lone map always ends at a bricked-up EXIT.
- The pedestal: when someone from every house stands in the centre, a stone pedestal lights on the TV and on their phones, with a riddle: "Four roads end here, and so does the light. The more of me there is, the less you see. This morning you learned the word that ends me." (Darkness: they learned Lumos in Charms that morning.)
- Lumos: the phones at the pedestal are quietly listening. Nothing tells the players so. The moment anyone says Lumos out loud, the TV and every phone flood with white light. If they only whisper it, or a phone doesn't hear, press They said it on the GM screen.
- The answer: they hold their four maps, stacked and lined up, flat against the bright TV. The whole circles lead to the way out, and the eye stares back at them. Then each of them walks it.
- When everyone is out, the puzzle solves itself and the phones come back.

TIP

Let the eye land. When the stack goes up against the TV and someone spots it, stop talking. Then say, very quietly: "Who drew that?" Nobody did. It was in every map all along.

TIP

Some Android phones can turn on their real torch from the page (a Brighter button appears once the light is lit). iPhones can't, so players just turn their screen brightness up. The first time the pedestal listens, the phone asks for the microphone: that is part of the magic. Say nothing.

RELICS

Legendary and mythic things

One of each in the whole world. Relics are rewards for big moments: a brave choice, a solved mystery, a kindness nobody asked for.

Give a relic from the Players tab: Give a relic, pick it, and change any words first. It appears on that student's phone as a card with its story, what it always does, what it does when used, and its drawback. Hand over the relic card (T11) and the prop at the same moment, in the story.

Relic	Where it could turn up	Make it from
The Sword of Gryffindor (Mythic)	Day 7 in the Undercroft, pulled from the Sorting Hat after a truly brave act	A card blade covered in grey pencil, a clay hilt with red marker "rubies", glued together. Hide it inside a hat.
A Phoenix Tear (Mythic)	The Hospital Wing, after someone risks themselves for another	A tiny clay vial with a single drop of clear glue dried inside the neck.
Vale's First Brush (Mythic)	The Undercroft, or offered by the painting	A real paintbrush with its handle wrapped in black yarn, the bristles dipped in red marker.
The Blackwood Seal Ring	A Blackwood portrait, or behind the oldest shield in the Trophy Room	A clay ring with a flat face. Press a B into it while soft: it then really stamps your clay seals.
The Lantern of the Dark Room	The way out of the Mirror in the Dark	A paper lantern: a tube of paper with windows cut out, a clay base and a yarn handle. Put a phone torch inside.
The Moonlit Compass	The Astronomy Tower at night, or the ancient chest	A clay disc with a paper needle on a pin, so it really spins. No letters on it.
The Old Boot	Under the floorboards of the Shrieking Shack	A real old shoe. Everyone grabs it on three.
The Twin Cabinet Key	The Room of Requirement	A big clay key with a cabinet shape pressed into the bow.
The Goblin-Silver Dagger	The cursed chest, or by owl from the Okafors	A card blade covered in pencil graphite (it shines silver), with a clay handle.
The Silver Memory	The Restricted Section, or from the Headmaster	A clay vial with a twist of shiny paper inside. When it is poured, read the memory aloud.

A memory for the Silver Memory

READ ALOUD

Candlelight in the Great Hall, three hundred years ago. A tall man in a paint-flecked coat stands at an easel while a girl in Hufflepuff yellow sits very still for him. "Don't move," he says kindly. "I only need a little more of your colour." She smiles. With every stroke, she grows a little greyer, and she doesn't notice. Behind him, on the wall, a dozen finished portraits are watching, and every one of them is a student.

TIP

Relics are strong on purpose, and each has a cost. Use the drawbacks: a Gringotts letter arriving at breakfast, the painting whispering to the ring-bearer at night, the boot landing everyone in the lake. A relic should make the story bigger, not shorter.

T1 Secret gift cards

THE THING NOBODY AT HOGWARTS KNOWS

Spider-Speech

Always. You understand spiders, and they understand you. They live in every corner of the castle, and they notice everything.

Once a day. Ask the spiders in a room what they saw there since yesterday. The DM answers in a few short, whispery words.

The catch. Spiders want paying: give up a food item from your Bag, or they ignore you until tomorrow. And they will not go anywhere near the covered painting.

THE THING NOBODY AT HOGWARTS KNOWS

Fashionably Late

Always. You are late for everything. But the castle seems to bend around it: you always turn up at exactly the moment things get interesting.

Once a day. Burst into a scene or a fight that has already started, wherever the others are. In a fight you join at the start of the next round, and your first spell gets +2 to hit.

The catch. At every morning class the DM rolls a d20 for you. On 1 to 6 you are late: lose 5 house points, and the teacher remembers your name for the wrong reasons.

THE THING NOBODY AT HOGWARTS KNOWS

Green Thumb

Always. Plants like you. You know any plant on sight (what it does, and whether it bites), you roll with advantage in Herbology, and you can learn Herbology spells nobody else is taught.

Once a day. Ask a plant for help: a vine lowers itself for you to climb, a hedge parts, a Mandrake stays quiet, or the grass tells you who walked past.

The catch. Plants feel what you feel. When you are angry or frightened, the plants around you go wild. And Devil's Snare always grabs you first.

Rat-Speech

Always. You can talk to rats. They know every crack, pipe and pantry in the castle.

Once a day. Send a rat to listen in a room or follow someone for one block. At the start of the next block, the DM tells you what it heard.

The catch. Rats are cowards and gossips: on a d20 of 1 to 5, it also tells someone else what you asked. And the caretaker's cat can smell rat on you, so after curfew you roll with disadvantage to stay hidden.

THE THING NOBODY AT HOGWARTS KNOWS

Mirror Self

Always. You can make a magical illusion of yourself. It looks, moves and smiles like you, but it cannot speak or touch anything.

Once a day. For one scene, send your illusion somewhere you are not: as a decoy, an alibi, or to walk into danger first. In a fight, the first attack that would hit you hits the illusion instead, and it pops.

The catch. While it is up you cannot cast spells. If it is hit or touched it bursts, and you feel it: 1d4 damage. And something else in this castle copies people. It has noticed you.

The Battered Suitcase

Always. You carry an old suitcase with the initials N.S. worn into the handle. Inside is a whole world of magical creatures, and they let you in.

Once a day. Let one creature out to help for a scene: a Niffler sniffs out something shiny or hidden, a Bowtruckle picks a small lock, or an Occamy squeezes into any gap to fetch something.

The catch. Things get out. Each morning the DM rolls a d20: on 1 to 4, something escaped in the night and is causing chaos somewhere in the castle. Catch it before a teacher does, or the case is confiscated. Professor Scamander would very much like to know where you got it.

THE THING NOBODY AT HOGWARTS KNOWS

The Invisibility Cloak

Always. You own a real Invisibility Cloak, silvery and light as water. Under it, nobody can see you.

Once a day. Its old magic tires: wear it for one scene a day. Unseen, you can slip past anyone, and in a fight your first attack has advantage (after that, they know where you are).

The catch. It hides you, not your sound, your smell or your footprints: the Marauder's Map still shows you, creatures smell you, ghosts walk straight through you, and Quill's Sight sees a shimmer. Two can hide under it only if both pass a DEX roll. If a teacher catches you in it, it is confiscated for a week.

FROM THE SUITCASE

Niffler

Sniffs out one shiny or hidden thing in the room. Ask the DM what it found.

FROM THE SUITCASE

Bowtruckle

Picks one small lock: a drawer, a box, a little chest. Not a door.

FROM THE SUITCASE

Occamy

Shrinks to fit any gap and fetches one small thing from the other side.

FROM THE SUITCASE

ESCAPED!

Something got out in the night. Hide this card until the DM asks for it.

T2 Family keepsakes

One small reminder of each family's secret. Tea-stain, tear the edges, and hand them out with the gift cards.

Blackwood: A torn page from your grandmother's diary

…and still the painted man waits. Mother said the Blackwoods owe him a debt, or that he owes us one; she would never say which.

Whatever you do, child, never let anyone unwrap a covered painting. Some of them are not empty.

— E. B.

Sinclair: A letter from your sister

Dear _____,

The castle feels wrong this year. The portraits go quiet when I walk past, and there's a covered painting on the third floor that nobody will admit putting there.

Don't tell Mum and Dad. Just keep an eye out for me when you get here. You're the only one I've told.

Your sister

Fenwick: A card from Fenwick's Fizzing Follies, Diagon Alley

FENWICK'S FIZZING FOLLIES

Jokes, japes and things your mother warned you about. Diagon Alley, next to the cauldron shop.

On the back, in your great-uncle's writing: "The words wake it. I never wrote them down. The boy with the other half has been watching. Be cleverer than he is."

Thornbury: Bramble's tag, torn in half

BRAMBLE

Hippogriff, grey and silver, five years old. Thornbury Farm, Welsh hills.

If found, please retur…

Tip: press this onto a flat clay tag, tear the clay edge while it is soft, and hang it on black yarn.

Quill: A note from home, and a sketch you don't remember drawing

Floss every night, write every week, and don't let anyone turn you into anything. We are so proud of you. Love, Mum and Dad.

On the back, in your own pencil: two eyes, drawn over and over, all of them looking at you.

Penrose: A programme from the Penrose Theatre, Penzance

THE PENROSE PLAYERS PRESENT: A HUNDRED FACES

In memory of Morwenna Penrose, who played every part in this company until the summer she sat for her portrait.

Pencilled in the margin: "She never changed her face again. The painting was never delivered. Where did it go?"

T2 Family keepsakes

One small reminder of each family's secret. Tea-stain, tear the edges, and hand them out with the gift cards.

Okafor: A carbon copy of your mum's Gringotts report

GRINGOTTS · CURSE-BREAKING REPORT

Item: one portrait, wrapped in grey cloth. Destination: Hogwarts School. Inspector: A. Okafor.

Finding: OCCUPIED. Recommendation: do not ship.

Stamped across the bottom in red: OVERRULED. SENT.

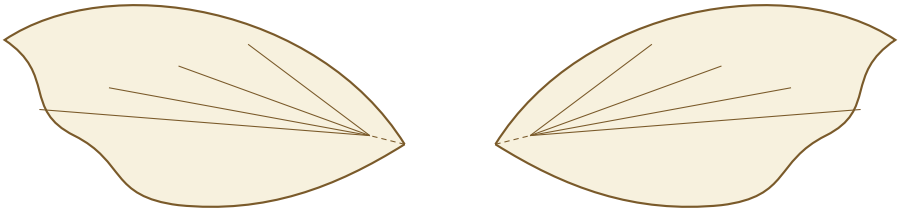

T3 Golden Snitch wings

Cut around each wing. Fold the short tab at the root and glue it into the slit you cut in the clay ball.

T5 The three ring clues

Tea-stain and cut out. Scratch the note with a pin. Roll the star chart and slide it into the Snitch. Fold the feathered card.

Scratched note (first ring): Trophy Room

Star chart (second ring): Astronomy Tower, inside the Snitch

“The second ring follows the lamp of the night.”

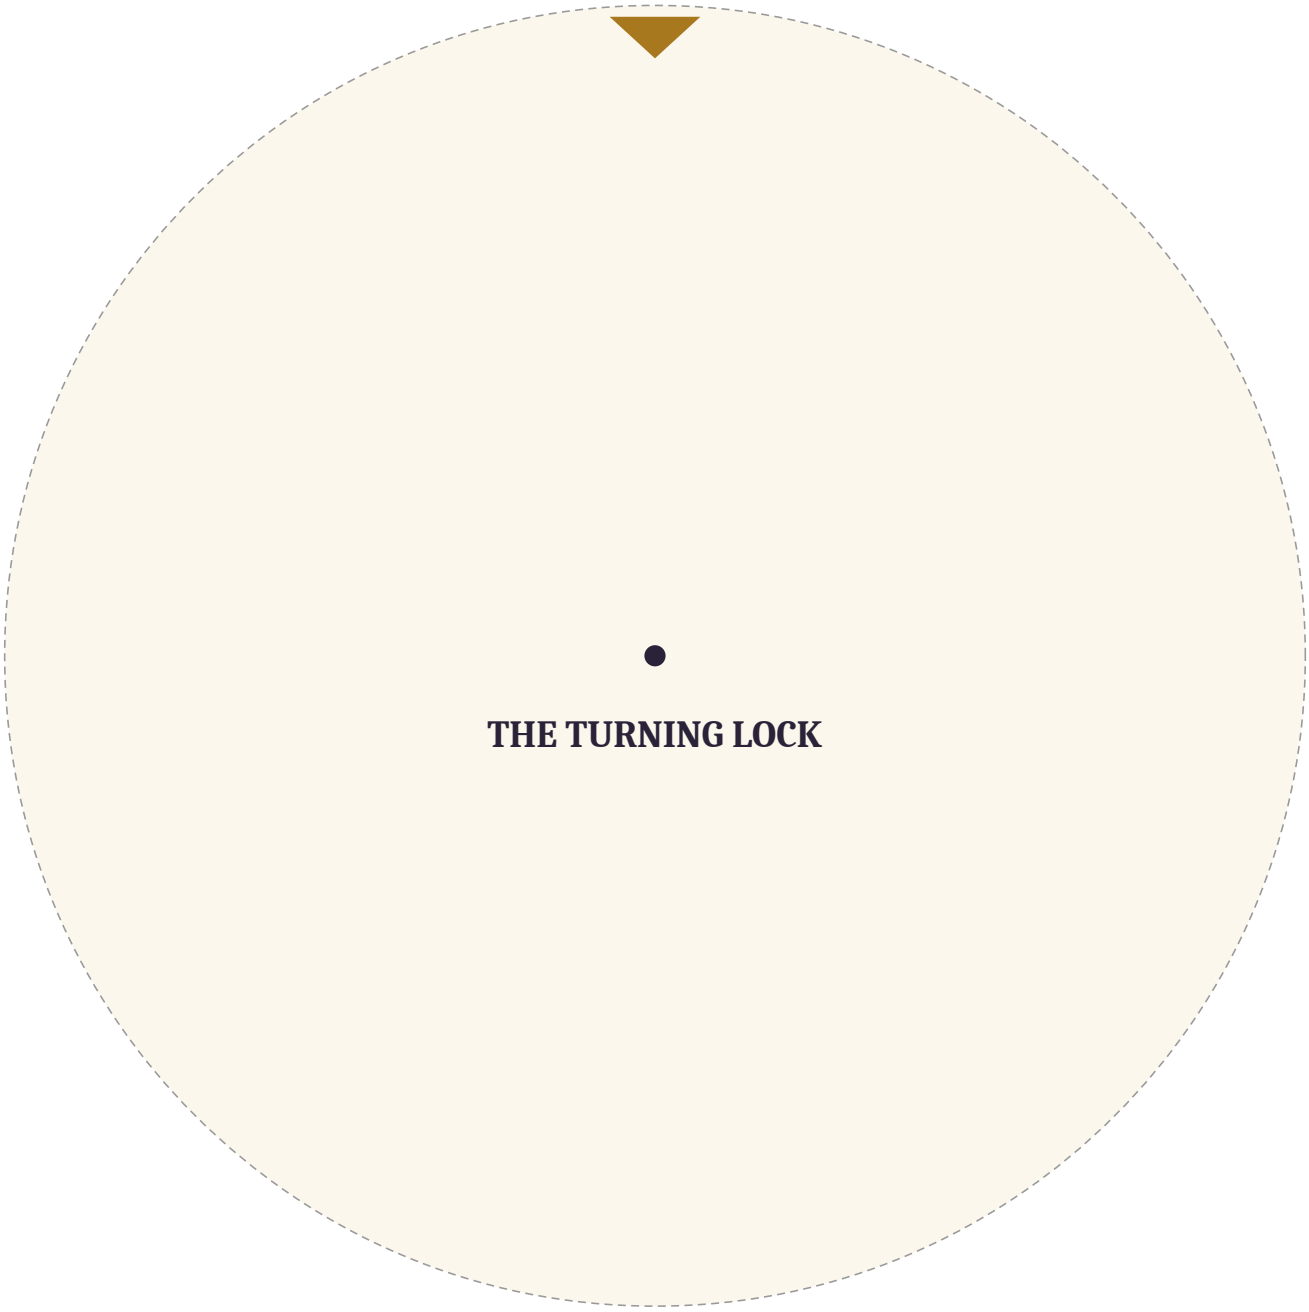

Feathered card (last ring): Owlery. Fold in half, glue a paper feather on the front front: glue a feather here

“The last ring belongs to the one who carries every letter.”

T6 The Turning Lock (1 of 3): the base

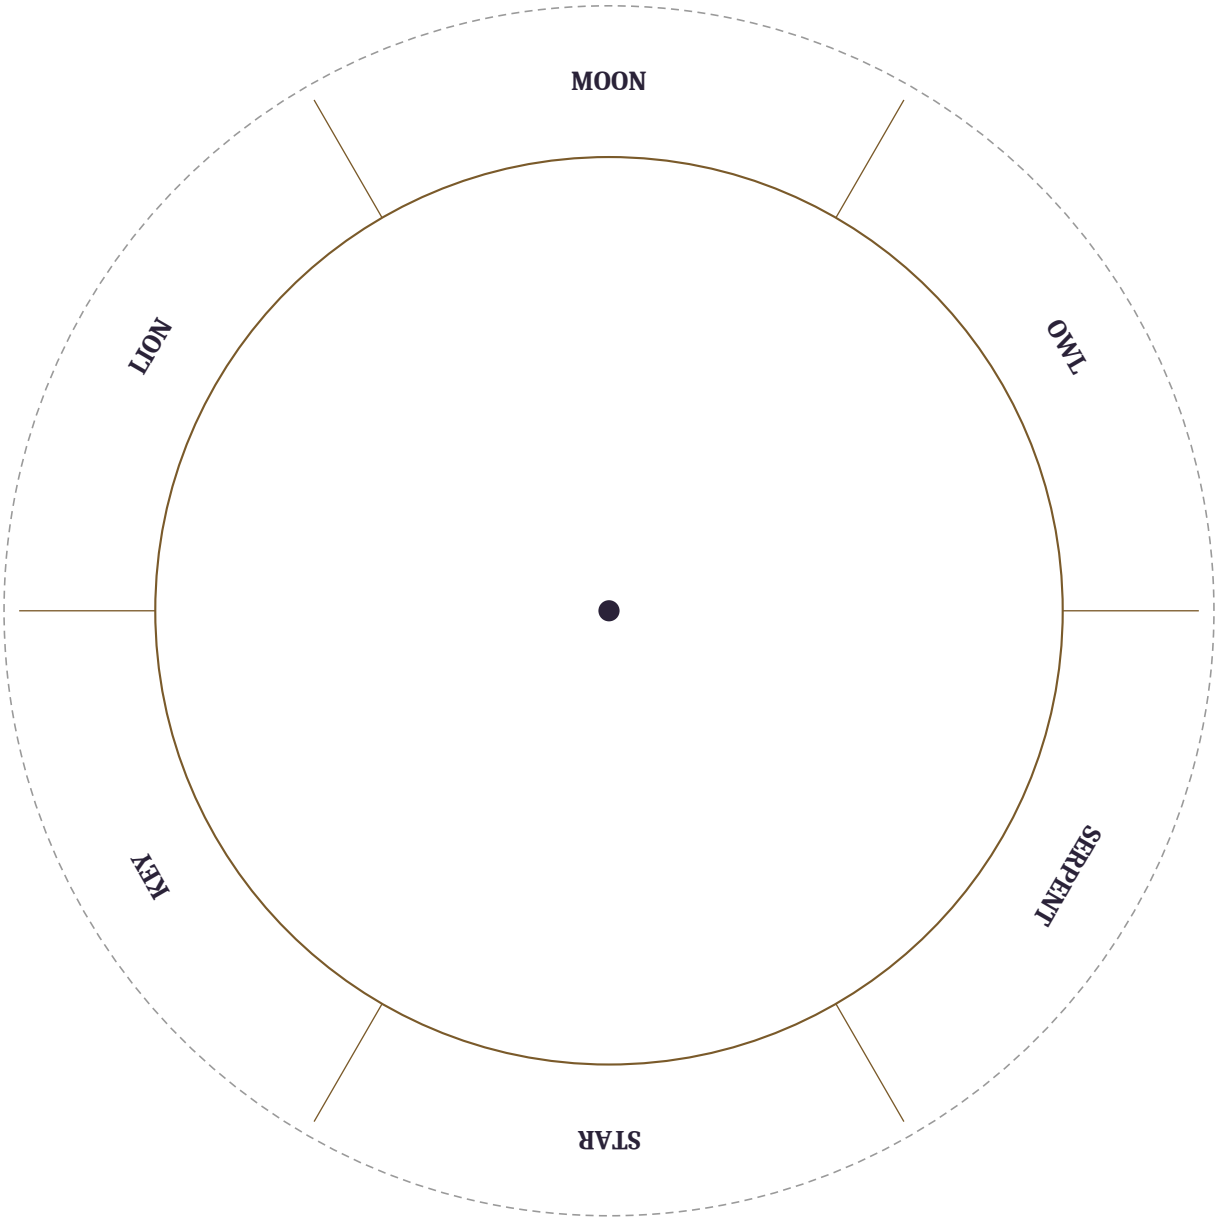

Glue every part onto card, then cut out. Stack: base, ring 1, ring 2, ring 3. Push a pencil through the centre dots. Only the rings turn.

The base stays still. The arrow points down at the three symbols that open the lock.

T6 The Turning Lock (2 of 3): ring 1

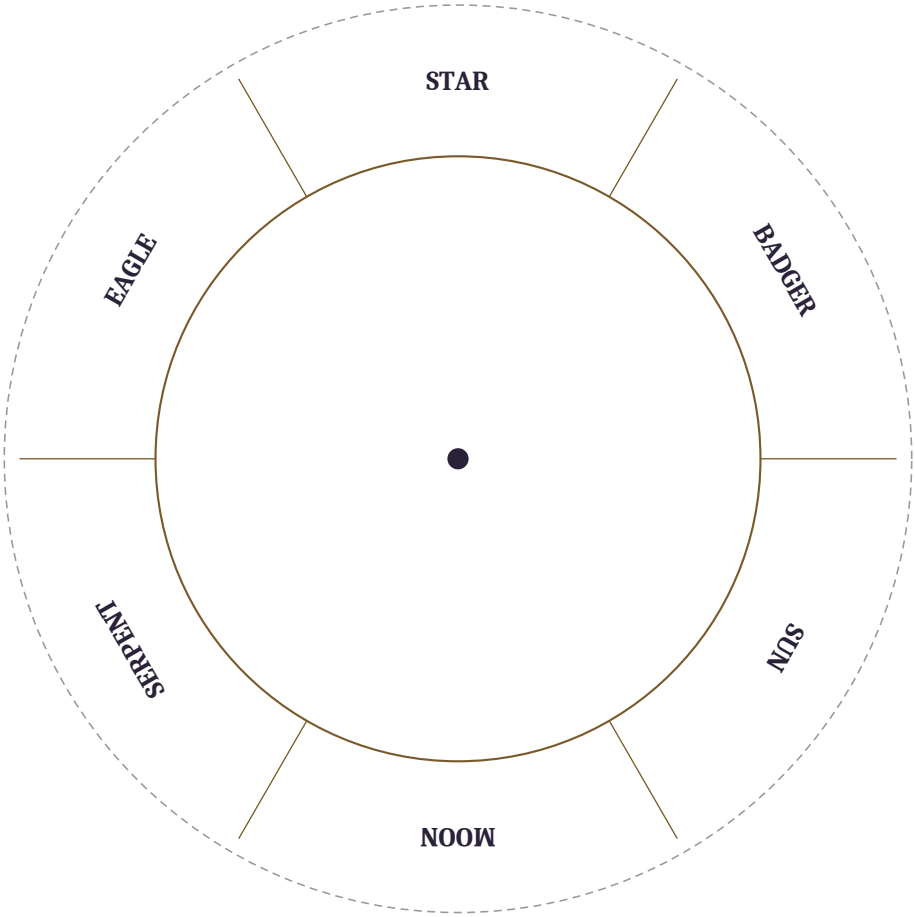

Ring 1 sits on the base. Its symbols go round the outside edge.

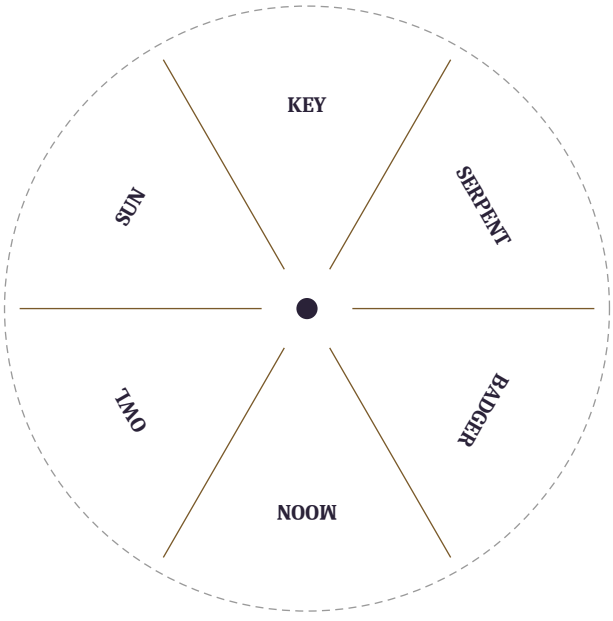

Ring 1 (outer)

T6 The Turning Lock (3 of 3): rings 2 and 3

Ring 2 sits on ring 1, ring 3 on top. Turn them until the right three symbols line up under the arrow.

Ring 2 (middle)

Ring 3 (inner)

T7 Vale’s diary and the torn map edge

Tea-stain these dark and tear the edges. Give each diary page as it is found in the app.

The riddle card

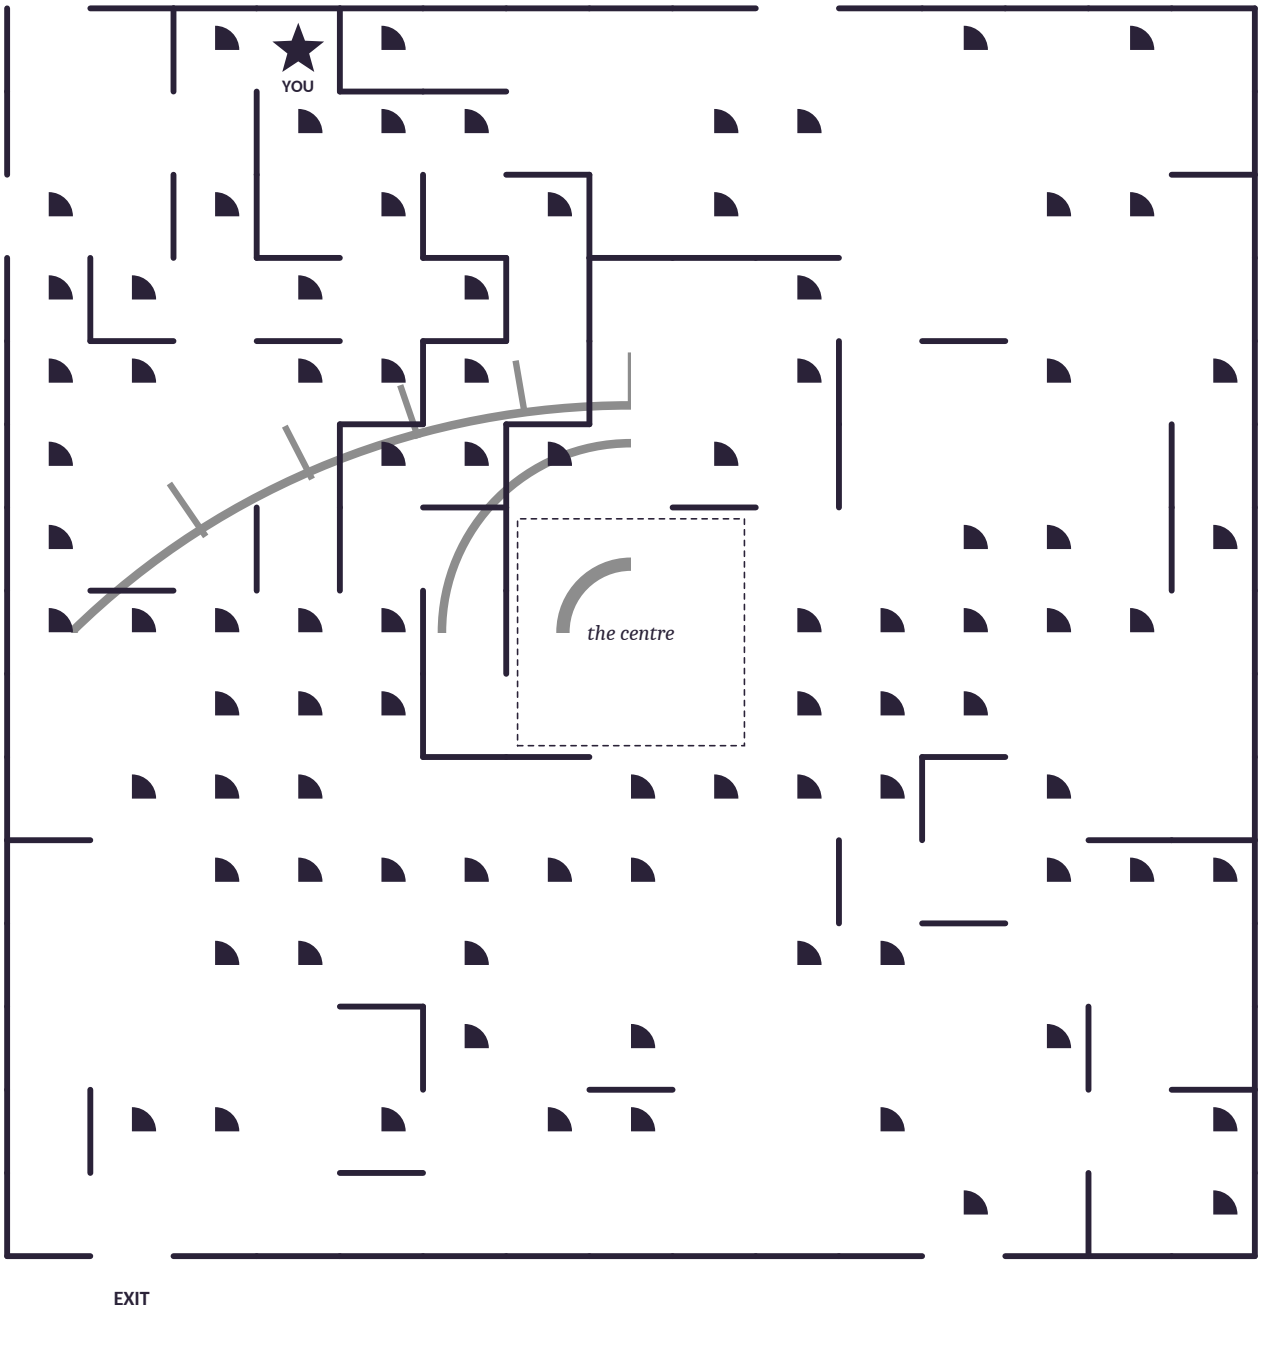

THE SEVEN BOTTLES

Seven bottles stand in a row. One lets you walk on through the fire. One leads safely back. Two bring a deep sleep. Three are poison. Only one of you may drink to go forward.

1. No poison stands beside the way back.
2. No two poisons stand side by side.
3. Every tall bottle is poison.
4. The way back stands beside a sleeping draught.
5. The way forward is neither red nor clear.
6. The way forward stands somewhere to the left of the way back.

The way through the dark

"I came through the glass and ran. This is all I remember. The others drew the rest." Aldous Penhallow, Gryffindor, 1726

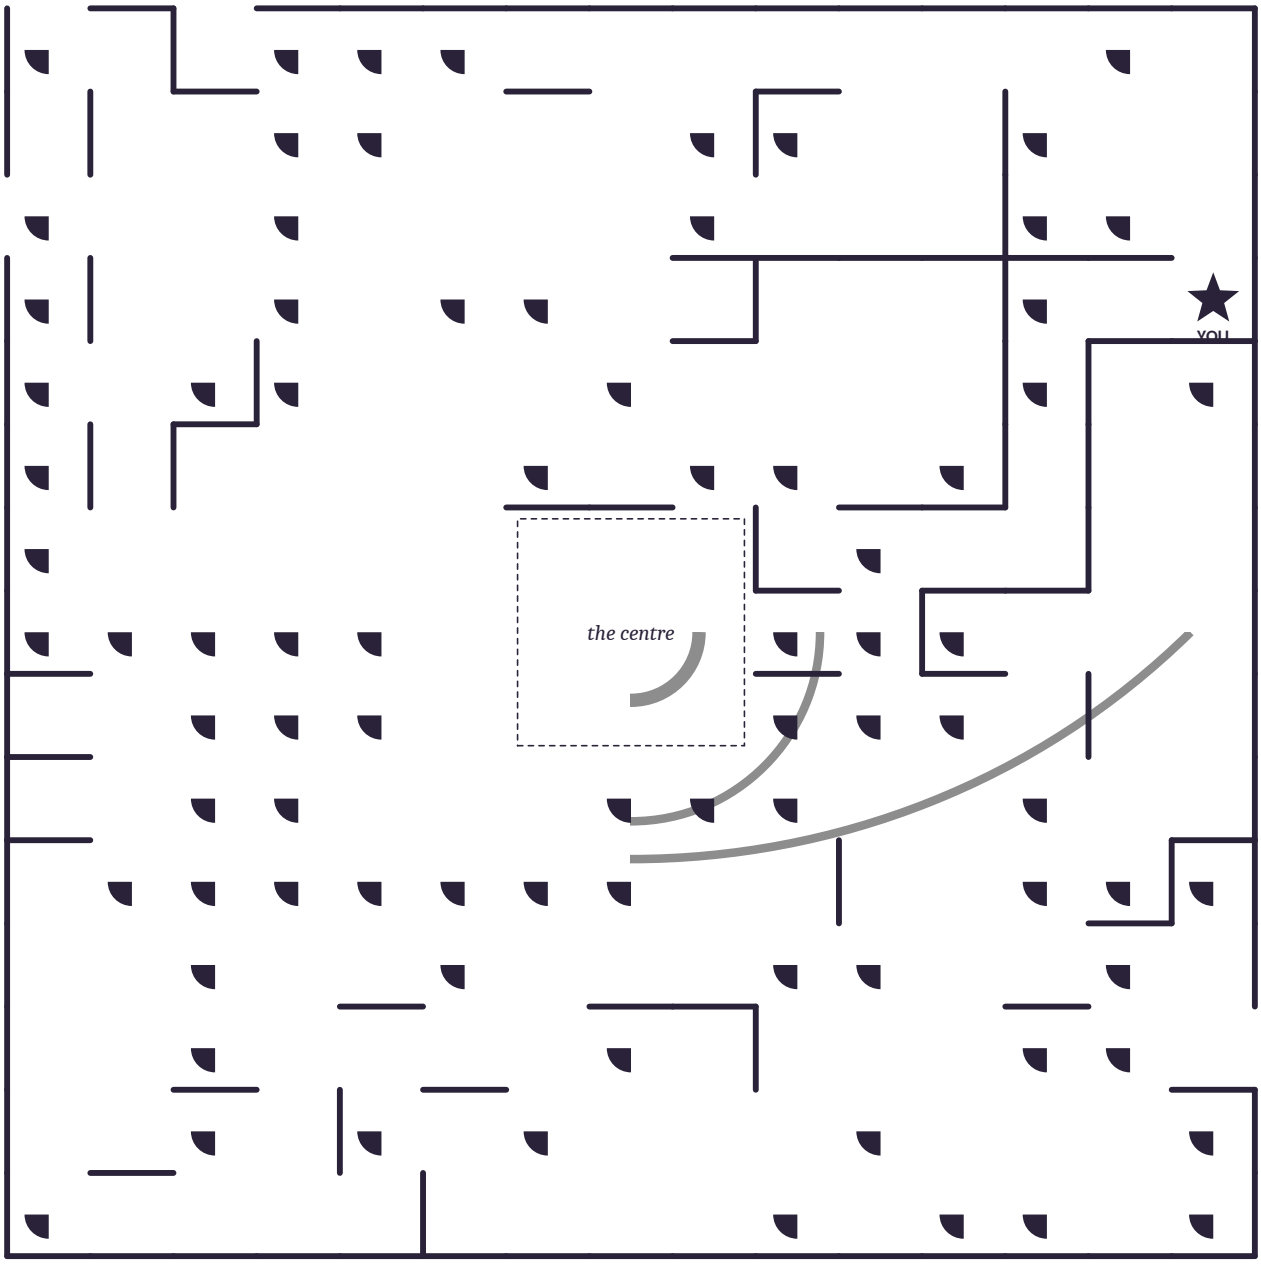

The way through the dark

"I walked it twice, slowly. My part is right. Trust the others for theirs." Merryn Holt, Hufflepuff, 1726

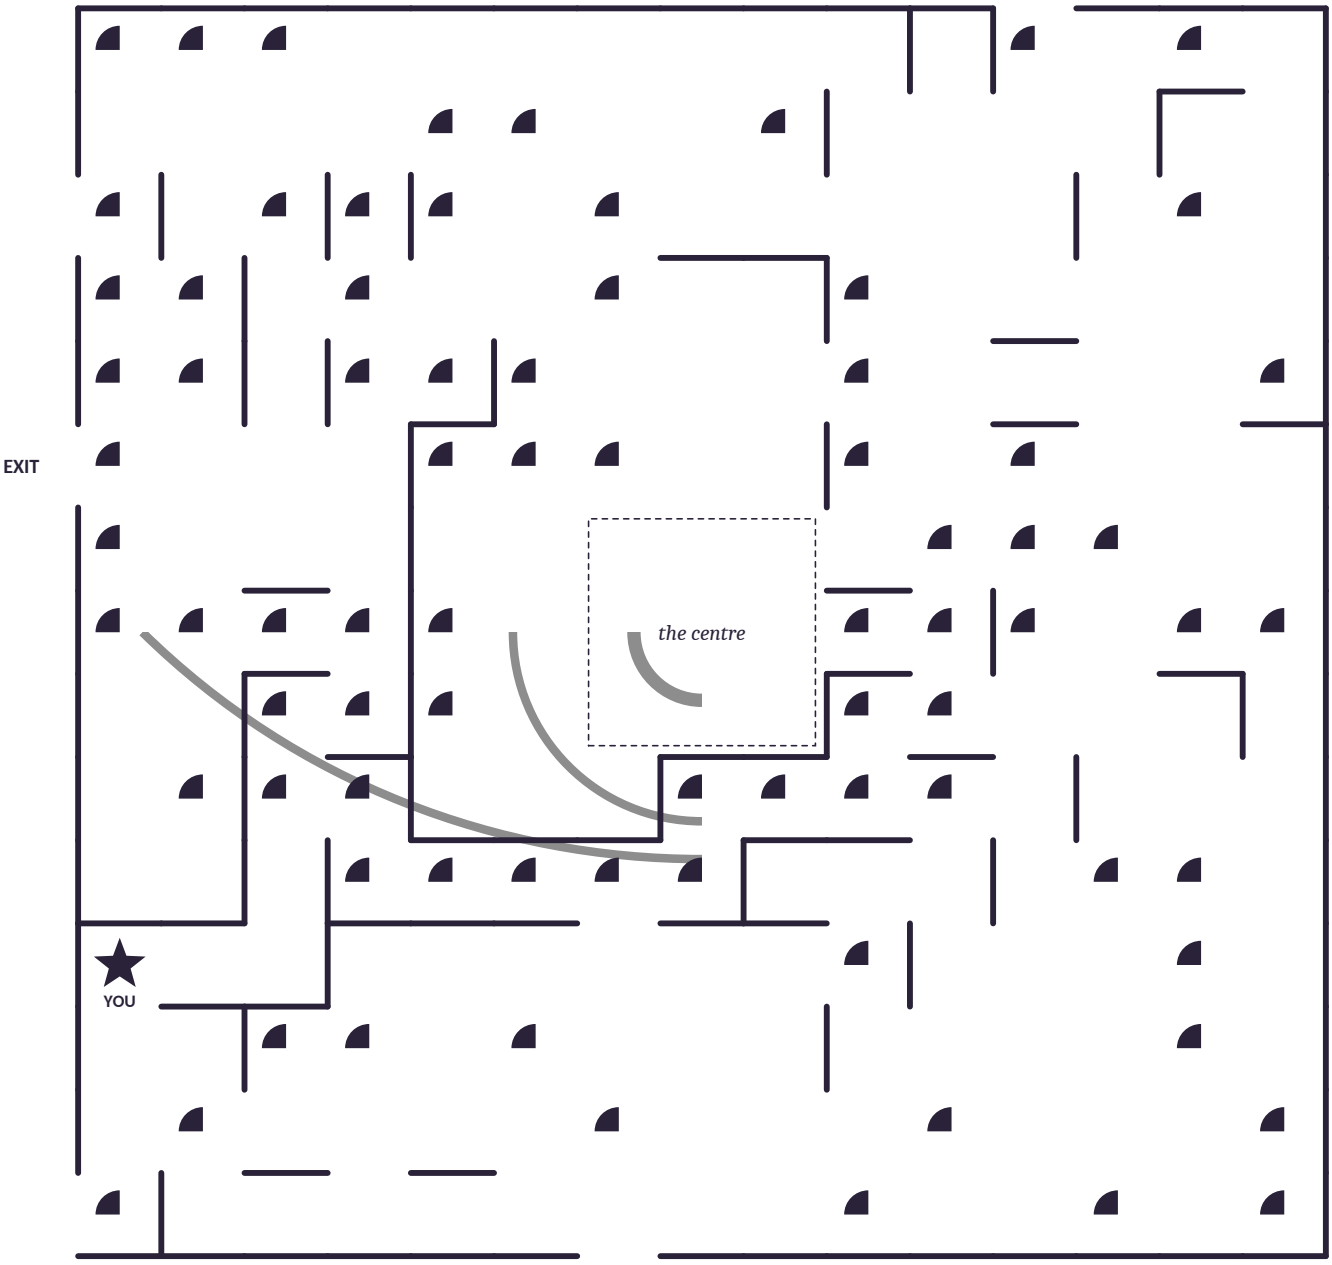

The way through the dark

"I measured what I could in the dark. Where my lines stop, I could not see." Isolde Varga, Ravenclaw, 1726

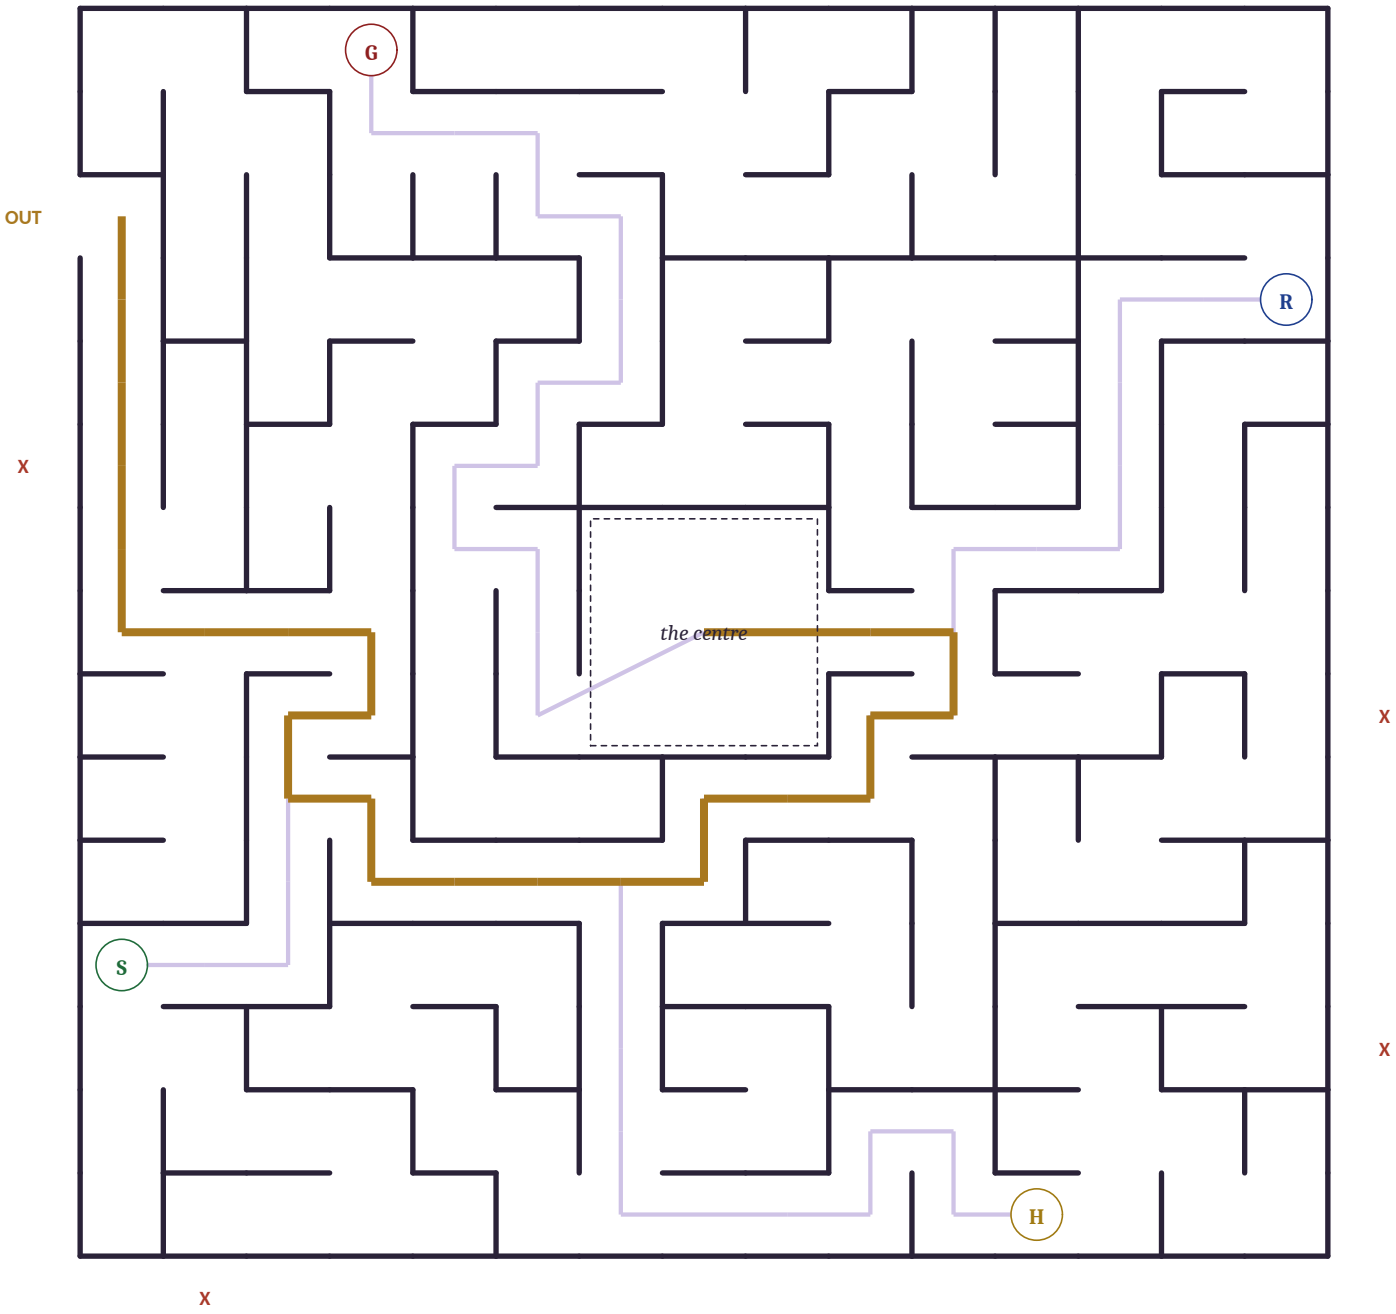

The way through the dark

"I marked only what was useful to me. Find the others where the four roads meet. We did." Silas Crane, Slytherin, 1726

T10 The Mirror Maze: GM key (do not hand out)

Every real wall. Gold: the only way out. G H R S: where each house starts. X: the bricked-up EXITs.

The phones enforce the walls, move the watcher and show the riddle. This sheet is for you to follow along.
Each house map is exact from its YOU to the centre. Beyond it, each shows only some walls, and its own EXIT is bricked up.
Stacked against the lit TV: the walls add up, every EXIT closes, the whole circles (a quarter from each map) mark the way out, and a great eye appears round the centre, with HE SEES YOU beneath the maze.

T11 Relic cards (1 of 3)

Hand over the card with the relic, in the story. Print on card if you can.

MYTHIC RELIC

The Sword of Gryffindor

A silver blade set with rubies. It can't be owned, only earned: it comes to a true Gryffindor in their darkest moment, pulled from the old Sorting Hat.

Always. While you hold it you can't be frightened, and your spells deal +2 damage to anything Vale has made.

When used. Strike with the blade itself: d20 + STR to hit, 3d8 damage. Anything painted, Vale included, takes double.

The cost. It stays for one fight only. When the danger has passed, it is simply gone, until it is needed again.

MYTHIC RELIC

A Phoenix Tear

A single tear in a crystal vial, given freely by a phoenix to someone who stayed loyal when it would have been easier to run.

Always. The vial is warm to the touch. Paint Wraiths and other dark things hesitate: they attack you with disadvantage.

When used. Once ever: one drop heals anyone to full HP and lifts every curse and status on them, or wakes one drained student completely.

The cost. There is only one drop. Once it is used, it is gone for ever.

MYTHIC RELIC

Vale's First Brush

The brush Corvin Vale painted his first living portrait with. Three hundred years on, the bristles are still wet.

Always. You feel paint the way others feel weather: you always know when something painted is close.

When used. Paint a doorway on any wall and it is a real door for one scene. Or paint over a wound: heal 2d6.

The cost. Every use adds 1 Corruption, and Vale feels it. He starts talking to you. He is very persuasive.

LEGENDARY RELIC

The Blackwood Seal Ring

The ring a Blackwood pressed into hot wax three hundred years ago, to seal Corvin Vale inside his own canvas.

Always. Painted magic can't take hold of you: the Painted Double can't copy you, and Vale can't drain you.

When used. Press the ring to a door, a frame or a painting: it is sealed shut for the rest of the day. Nothing comes out, nothing goes in.

The cost. Vale knows this ring. Paint Wraiths always go for you first, and from Day 5 the painting whispers to you at night.

T11 Relic cards (2 of 3)

Hand over the card with the relic, in the story. Print on card if you can.

LEGENDARY RELIC

The Lantern of the Dark Room

A small iron lantern waiting at the way out of the mirror maze. Its flame is cold and blue, and it has never gone out.

Always. You are never in the dark: no spell, wind or water can put your light out.

When used. Hold it up to a wall, a page or a painting: invisible writing, hidden doors and secret marks show in its light.

The cost. In its light, anything painted can see you too. While it is lit, you can't hide from Vale's servants.

LEGENDARY RELIC

The Moonlit Compass

A brass compass with no north, south, east or west. Its needle is a sliver of moonlight.

Always. You can never truly be lost: you always know the way back to your common room.

When used. Ask it what you need most. The needle points: the DM tells you which way, and roughly how far.

The cost. It points to what you need, not what you want. Sometimes that is a person you would rather avoid.

LEGENDARY RELIC

The Old Boot

A mouldy, laceless boot. It is secretly a Portkey, charmed long ago and never collected.

When used. Once: everyone touching it is whisked to one place the holder names, anywhere in the castle or the grounds. Count to three and grab on.

The cost. The landing is rough: everyone takes 1d4 and is dizzy for a round. Afterwards, it is just a boot.

LEGENDARY RELIC

The Twin Cabinet Key

A tarnished key that fits any wardrobe or cupboard in the castle, and opens it onto its twin, deep in the Room of Requirement.

When used. Step into any cupboard or wardrobe and come out in the Room of Requirement, or the other way round. Up to three can go together.

The cost. Something else knows the way too. Each time, the DM rolls a d20: on a 1, something has followed you through.

T11 Relic cards (3 of 3)

Hand over the card with the relic, in the story. Print on card if you can.

LEGENDARY RELIC

The Goblin-Silver Dagger

Goblin-made silver, older than Hogwarts. It takes in only what makes it stronger.

Always. It never dulls and never tarnishes, and it cuts through any rope, vine or magical binding (Devil's Snare included).

When used. Strike with it for 2d6. Against painted things it drinks the paint: after it hits one, its next hit deals +1d6.

The cost. Goblins believe what they make still belongs to them. A polite, unmistakable letter from Gringotts will ask for it back.

LEGENDARY RELIC

The Silver Memory

A stoppered vial of silver mist: someone's memory, saved three hundred years ago.

When used. Once: pour it out and the whole table sees the memory. The DM tells the scene: a night in the castle when Corvin Vale still walked its halls.

The cost. Memories pull. Whoever pours it is lost in it for the rest of the scene, and wakes cold and shaking (−3 HP).
